

Specialization: Economics, bachelor's degree, full-time study

B1V24 Civil law annotation

4 ECTS, 144 academic hours.

Control form: pass/fail.

Abstract: Civil law is one of the main branches of law, the core of private law governing property and personal non-property relations based on equality of subjects. Contributing to formation and development market economy relations, strengthening property relations, civil law plays a critical role in the regulation of contractual relations.

To a large extent, this process is also facilitated by the latest scientific achievements. civil law. In this regard, it became necessary to change the process teaching a civil law course, bringing it in line with modern requirements.

The purpose of the discipline is the assimilation by students of the theoretical provisions of the material and law of obligations, civil legislation of the Russian Federation and practice its application, the main trends in the development of the science of civil law, in particular and general provisions of the law of obligations.

Relationship with other disciplines of the specialty: Discipline "Civil Law" refers to the variable part of the professional cycle. Interrelated with discipline "Right".