

Specialization: Economics, bachelor's degree, full-time study

B1V20 International monetary and credit relations

Annotation

4 ECTS, 144 academic hours.

Control form: exam.

Abstract: The course "International monetary and credit relations" provides basic knowledge about the trends and basic directions of changes in international monetary credit relations. In this discipline, students get acquainted with the basics of international monetary and credit relations, about the world capital market and about international credit.

Considered: the international monetary system, the exchange rate and its main types, as well as issues of regulation of the exchange rate.

The objectives of teaching the course are:

- acquisition of knowledge in the field of international monetary and credit relations;
- formation and consolidation of the skills of economic analysis in the field of external financial relations;
- characteristics of the international monetary system and methods of regulating the exchange rate;
- reflection of the movement of international financial capital;
- identification of the role of international credit.

Relationship with other disciplines of the specialty: the course "International Monetary and Credit Relations" is interconnected with such disciplines of the specialty "Economics" as "Microeconomics", "Macroeconomics", "World Economy and International Economic Relations", etc.

Requirements for the initial levels of knowledge and skills of students: Successful training in the course "International Monetary Relations" presupposes the availability of knowledge obtained as a result of mastering the courses "Macroeconomics", "Microeconomics", "World Economy", "International Economics".