

Specialization: Economics, bachelor's degree, full-time study

B1.B9 Macroeconomics annotation

12 ECTS, 432 academic hours.

Control form: exam.

Summary. The Macroeconomics Lecture Course is an introduction to fundamentals of macroeconomic theory and policy, and involves the study of key macroeconomic indicators, such as the volume of national output, economic growth, unemployment, inflation, etc.

During the lectures, the role of the state in the economy is examined in detail, especially monetary and fiscal policy, and the role of money and banking systems in the economy. After studying these topics, the macroeconomic policy in an open economy, in particular, the role of the balance of payments and methods of its regulation, as well as features of monetary policy. Separate topics are devoted to modern strategies of economic development and international cooperation.

Lectures involve an interactive communication format that allows students ask questions, bring up for discussion relevant questions within the discipline, take a direct part in the process of mastering new information.

The purpose of the discipline: to give students a general understanding of macroeconomic theory and problems of macroeconomic policy. Discipline objectives:

- Study of the mechanism of functioning of the national economy;
- Analysis of the main macroeconomic indicators and their interrelationships;
- Development of skills in the use of statistics and practical analysis dynamics of macroeconomic processes.

Relationship with other disciplines of the specialty: the course "Macroeconomics" is interconnected with such disciplines of the specialty "Economics" as "Applied Economic Analysis based on SPSS and STATA programs ", " State regulation of the economy ", "Problems of the Economy in Transition", "Money and Financial Markets", "Taxes and Taxation "and others.

Requirements for the initial levels of knowledge and skills of students: Studying the course of macroeconomics assumes basic knowledge of microeconomics and mathematics